

 the treasures of diptyque*

WE DON'T SEE
CURIOSITY AS
A VICE. WE SEE IT
AS ESSENTIAL.

Rounding off a year of celebration,
this fifth and final collection delivers
even more thoughtful gestures and surprises.

The common thread is curiosity,
time and an inheritance
passed on by the trio of founding artists. All three were astute collectors, whose open attitudes and aesthetic perspectives –
combined with their ability to discern
the beauty in all things and unearth wonders – were the key to the Maison's success and identity.

Thanks to their unabashed curiosity,
diptyque has become the very place
to ferret out the perfect present, an authentic treasure that is both
beautiful and lasting.

To mark its sixty-year anniversary, diptyque is highlighting this “essential flaw” even more strongly by offering a rich selection of surprising creations, conceived to enthrall and also to last, making them doubly precious. Like a big cabinet of curiosities overflowing with decorative and scented objects, the collection celebrating the festive season for 2021 holds out the promise of the ideal gift.

Beauty is a constant presence, one that’s clearly visible in the collection’s graphic design – which takes inspiration from the lines of the historic Basile pattern, then reworks them to evoke the veins in the hard stones decorating the walls of the first diptyque boutique at 34 boulevard Saint-Germain – and in the finishing touches and golden details on the products.

diptyque’s desire to combine form and function asserts itself more strongly than ever, taking its cue from the collection’s flagship product: the home fragrance diffuser, a truly decorative object in a timeless design.

The prismatic effects generated by the interaction of the reeds, the fragrance concentrate and the faceted glass of the container give it real presence, creating a diverse interplay of light and relief.

Conceived to stand the test of time and to be infinitely rechargeable, this new diffuser was designed to perfume large spaces over extended periods – the reeds absorbing and diffusing into the atmosphere, precisely as desired, one of the Maison’s three emblematic scents; Baies, Roses or Tubéreuse. It completes the existing collection of objects for the diffusion of diptyque perfume, broadening the range of available options and reaffirming the promise of the Maison – a perfume for every use and for every occasion.

This very special collection is also illuminated by a trio of limited-edition scented candles with gold-coloured lids, decorations in actual gold paint and colours that call to mind malachite, lapis lazuli and cornelian.

Each of the three scents is a unique interpretation of a winter classic, and hence the ideal accompaniment for the holiday season: Flocon, an olfactory transcription of snowfall, with light, velvety notes of white musks blended with those of mimosa, a winter flower; Biscuit, with the spicy flavours of festive end-of-year desserts enhanced by the density of patchouli; and Sapin, the fragrant freshness of mountain pines intensified by the woody notes of an open fire.

Even once they're consumed, these sumptuous candles can retain their brilliance, albeit in another, different manner: diptyque offers the option of giving a new lease of life thanks to decorative new accessories specially conceived to offer other ways of using the glass vessels of the candles.

This small revolution is made possible by the "nomad" – an accessory designed to accommodate an empty 190g glass vessel which can then, for example, be refilled with green plants, pencils or other precious knick-knacks, making it the ideal decoration for an office, bathroom or fireplace.

Then the "inseparable companions", designed to accommodate two empty glass candle vessels, one 190g and one 70g; this second object broadens the range of opportunities for decorative ingenuity, offering creative freedom in extending the life of diptyque candle purchases.

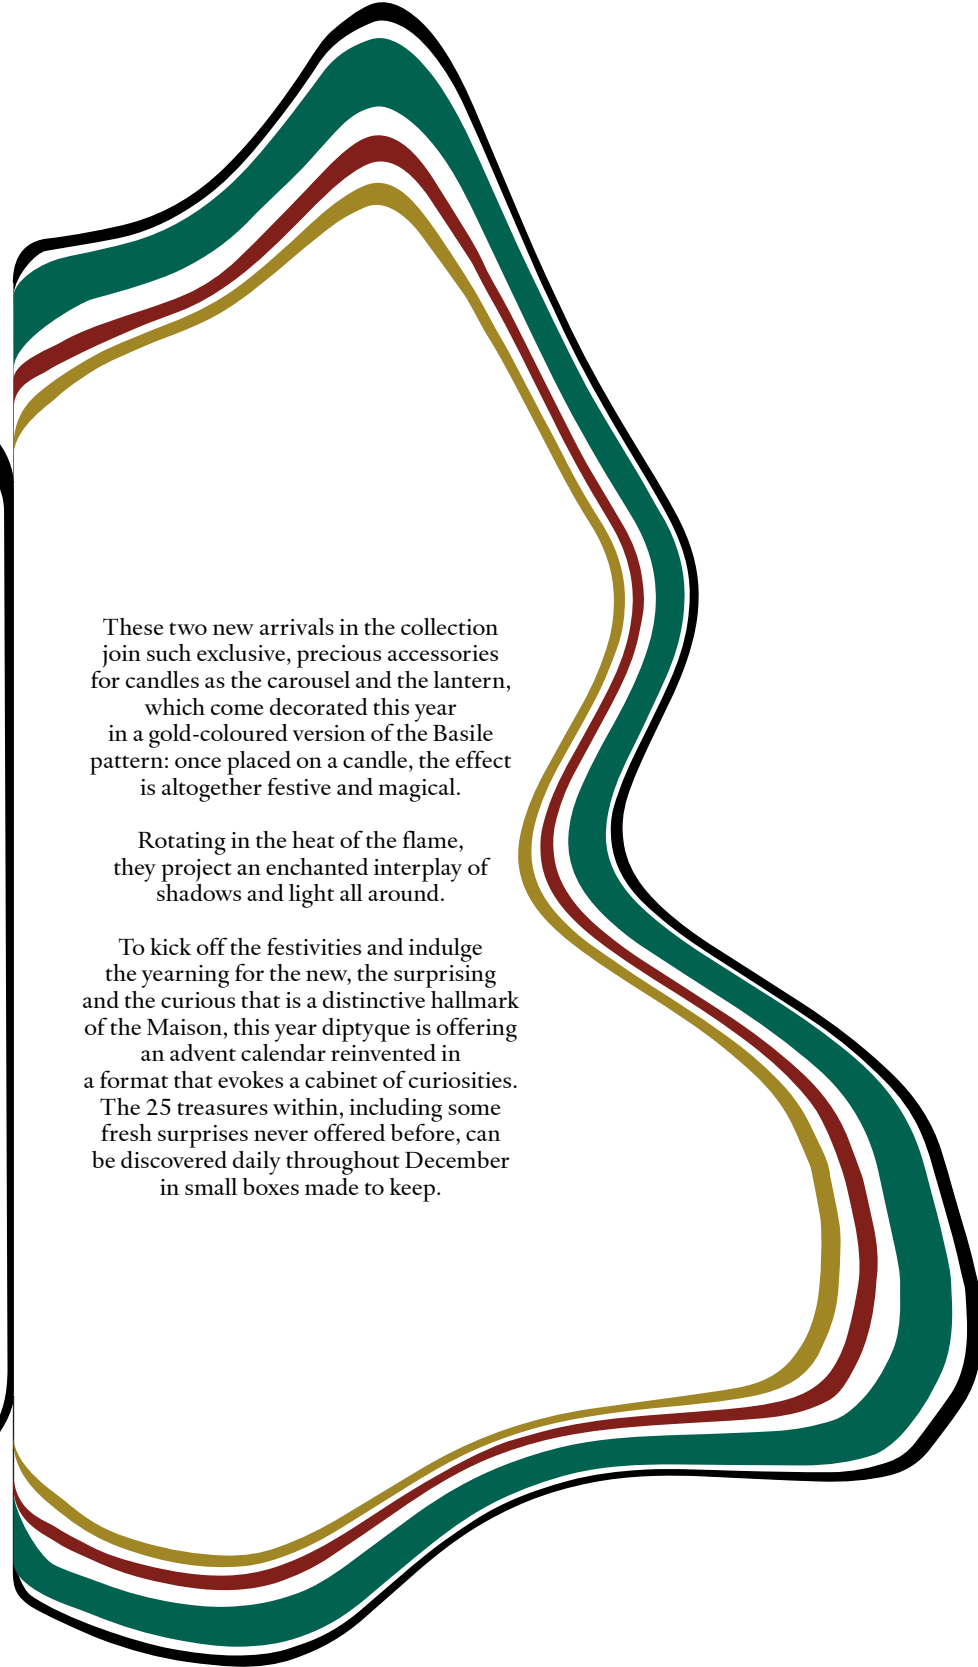

These two new arrivals in the collection join such exclusive, precious accessories for candles as the carousel and the lantern, which come decorated this year in a gold-coloured version of the Basile pattern: once placed on a candle, the effect is altogether festive and magical.

Rotating in the heat of the flame, they project an enchanted interplay of shadows and light all around.

To kick off the festivities and indulge the yearning for the new, the surprising and the curious that is a distinctive hallmark of the Maison, this year diptyque is offering an advent calendar reinvented in a format that evokes a cabinet of curiosities. The 25 treasures within, including some fresh surprises never offered before, can be discovered daily throughout December in small boxes made to keep.

The magic of the holiday season would not be complete without a personal fragrance, this time in two limited editions decked out in gold: the eau de parfum Do Son, its iconic illustration acquiring a new dimension for the occasion, and a solid perfume in a refillable golden case featuring the diptyque censer, allowing for multiple fragrance choices.

Taking in the full spectrum of possibilities and responding to the sheer diversity of the presents on offer, the 2021 Holiday Collection holds out a never-ending promise of enjoyment. It concludes in beauty, with three new arrivals: the first scented taper candles – Feu de bois, Ambre and Baies – not just a first for diptyque but also a substantial technical feat, combining perfume and hard wax while ensuring optimum combustion for such a thin object. Embellished at their base with a logo in gold, they will form a vibrant three-fold decoration for festive tables, adding subtle hints of fragrance.

diptyque is noted for its finely-honed, inquisitive eye and its capacity for offering astonishing objects and arousing our sense of wonder.

Accordingly, this collection, which celebrates both the holiday season and the sixty-year anniversary of the Maison, is set to delight with its richness, eclecticism and originality and its ability to think afresh about ways to use its products, all without any sacrifice in terms either of beauty or of excellence.

The diptyque spirit has not changed – if anything, it's grown stronger with the passing years.
